

Garden Club

I remember a scene in one of the old silent films, where a very small and chubby boy prince was putting his regiment through their paces. His short little legs were doing their best, but the long lines of marching men, their feet moving like machines, overtook him and went on, leaving their outraged commander in the rear. The caption read that, "Everyone was out of step but the Prince." And that is how it seems to us sometimes, that the whole world is out of step but ourselves, when all the time the fault lies with us. Our legs are too short to take the stride. Our stature is too small to keep in line. We are out of step, and the world has gone on and left us in the rear. That is why the drums have lost their rhythm. That is why the music has become a discord. But we don't see it that way. We are so blinded by our own egotism, so sure of ourselves, that we have ceased to watch our own feet. We only know that we are alone. That we are surrounded by confusion of sight and sound. That all around us is the babel of strange tongues. The universe is going on the same as ever, but we are out of step. We have broken the law, and in our blindness are pitting our puny selves against all the vast forces of nature and don't know it.

Swing into line. Get into step. The music is sweet up in front. The drums throb in time with your heart. Get in step with the universe and nothing will ever seem the same again. Get in step with the rose in your garden, and its loveliness will become a part of your life. Get in step with the bird that sings outside your window and your soul will have learned the secret of flight. Get in step with all life from the highest to the lowest, and you will know eternal life.

One of the greatest moments that can come to any man, is that moment when he becomes conscious that he is one with nature. When he realizes, for the first time, that he is not a conglomeration of separate things, but one harmonious whole. The same life that animates the grub crawling at your feet flows through you and I. The difference is not in kind but in quantity. There is no dividing line. The Old Mother gave birth to us all and no matter how lowly we may be, she receives us all in the end.

Your garden is not just an object of casual pleasure, it is your potential friend. Get in step and you will find the soul of your garden, and finding that, you will have found God.

The Northfield Garden Club met Sept. 11th at Shadow Lake, Mt. Hermon for its regular monthly meeting. The gardeners, Mrs. Mayberry, Mr. Pyper, Mr. Deming, Mr. Bodley, Mr. Jackson and Mr. Stark were visited. This was one of the most interesting meetings of the year and it is to be regretted that because of other engagements so few were present. Supper was eaten in the glow of the fire-light at Shadow Lake. After supper, a short and informal meeting was held at Mr. and Mrs. Mayberry's, where plans for a foliage drive in October, were discussed. BLANCHE CORSER

REPUBLICAN RALLY

Last Thursday night a group of young people under the name The Young People's Republican Club held an old-fashioned Rally and Dance in the Town Hall.

A torch light parade of about 50 cars and floats preceded the event. Many candidates for State and County offices took advantage of the opportunity of meeting Northfield people before the primary.

At the Rally the Hon. Ralph Clampt of Springfield and Mr. Bordutha of Mr. Clampt's Flying Squad of young speakers spoke to the gathering.

After the Rally dancing was enjoyed until one o'clock by a fair sized crowd. Edward Morgan was Chairman of the Rally. This young group called themselves the Wa-Wa Club early in the summer and was formed for social purposes only. However they saw an opportunity for Service to the Community and began the serious work of assuring a larger vote at the Primary.

At the dance prizes were awarded to Mrs. Miles Morgan and Mr. Milford Andrews for the Portland Fancy and to Mrs. Geo. Pefferle and Theodore Darby in the Prize Waltz. Master Robert Miller won the Herald Prize for the best youngster in costume and if he will visit the Editor's Office it will be presented to him. WILL ROGERS UPROARIOUS IN "HANDY ANDY"

His Wife Wants Him To Quit Work And Play - He Does!

Will Rogers is uproarious in "Handy Andy," which comes to the Town Hall Theatre Friday Sept. 21 according to reports from the Coast previews. In the picture his wife, Peggy Wood, wants him to play—and he does! And there to play—and he does! And there to hang most of the hilarious situations that go to make this his funniest picture.

Things run smoothly as long as Rogers is in his drug store. But when he sells out and starts to play, he finds life complicated. First he raises pigeons, until they escape into the house. Then he tries golf, with screamingly funny results.

But the climax comes when he goes with his wife to New Orleans to attend the Mardi Gras. He refuses to attend the ball with her. Later, however, wandering around alone, he encounters a fellow druggist and his lovely girl friend, Conchita Montenegro.

Mellowed by a few cocktails, Will decides to attend the ball after all, and he chooses a leopard skin as his costume. A few more cocktails lend him the courage to try an adagio dance with the lithe Conchita. Then the fun begins. His rough and tumble dance starts a fight that ends in a riot. And there's a surprise ending that hasn't been divulged in advance of the showing.

David Butler directed the picture under the supervision of Sol M. Wurtzel. The screen play was written by William Conselman and Henry Johnson from the play "Merry Andrew" by Lewis Beach.

EDITORIAL

The present Textile Strike is being widely criticized by a great many people but the fact of the matter is that it may prove to be a blessing in disguise to New England and the Textile Mills here as well as the Textile Worker.

Some years ago a smart manufacturer discovered the possibilities of the South as a source of untapped cheap labor. The laws, if any, in the dark spot of America, allowed little children to work as long hours as their parents. Presto! Here is the place for a cotton mill of the old school. New England long ago placed decent restrictions on the hours for women and children who make up a large percentage of the spinning and weave shop help in any cotton plant.

The reasons advanced for the general exodus to the South was the fact that they would be nearer the raw product. Without going into the many ramifications of that argument it is sufficient to say that the savings made by being nearer the raw product are negligible. What the Textile Pirate wanted was 5 and 6 dollar a week labor.

It is a known fact in the trade that Southern Labor and Southern weather conditions are far inferior to the same conditions in New England.

The South never can make the very finest cotton cloth because of certain climatic conditions necessary for perfection which do not exist there.

So Cheap Labor was the only thing that made the South attractive to the Mill Man. If the Textile Workers win this strike and force the mills to pay a living wage in both sections of the country we may see many mills come back North where all conditions are favorable for manufacture, transportation and sale. The mills in the South without their child labor and starvation wages to all labor cannot stand the competition that New England will give them.

So the Textile Strike may not be a bad break for New England if the strikers win. The attitude of several mills here in the North who have already signed the new agreements is significant of the fact that they feel that New England can pay a living wage to her people and still compete against the world.

People's Forum

Dear Mr. Editor:

The terrible tragedy which dared to stalk into our quiet isolated community, has made us adults very thoughtful as to conditions in our present life, which we are allowing to exist and come to fruition in just such a horrible crime. The biggest flaw in our modern life is the lack of moral training and character building in our children. Because of our denominational rivalries, the Protestant Church has prevented the proper teaching of morals of character building in our schools. Only about one half of the children in this country attend church school, and this for only one hour a week under teaching conditions far inferior to our public schools. Many homes give no moral training to the child, and certainly the streets do not furnish it. Where may the child get any idea of high moral standards for living?

Today we are harvesting our first generation of children and adolescents brought upon the movies. How do we like the result?

We hear so often, "Is this good business: Is this good politics?" Has not the time come for us to ask, "Is this good character building?" If not, we adults would better get busy.

Bruce Barton in "Colliers" in commenting upon Lincoln's tribute "All that I am I owe to my mother," wonders if some future statesman will say: "I owe a lot to my mother, she taught me to inhale a cigarette and to blow the smoke through my nose."

Nature abhors a vacuum. If the adult world will provide a predominance of the good healthy stimuli for our children, they will get it and use it. If not, they will get and use what unprincipled adults furnish.

"The wilsons in every state in the country are crowded today as never before. This is a reflection upon the character and the intelligence of the people in any coun-

Preventive Dentistry

Preventive dentistry is as important as preventive medicine. It is much more economical to keep the teeth from decaying than to have them filled or extracted.

Calcium and phosphorus are two elements necessary for the growth and development of strong, healthy teeth. Unless the body gets these elements in sufficient form food, strong, healthy teeth will not develop. Generous quantities of vitamins A, C, and D are necessary in order that the calcium and phosphorus may be used to best advantage. Calcium is found in the leafy green vegetables, but milk is the only food which contains a sufficient amount to supply the calcium needs of children. Phosphorus is more widely distributed in such foods as whole cereals, beans and peas, lean beef, egg yolk, nuts, and cheese.

A well balanced diet tends toward strong healthy teeth. Good teeth are resistant to bacterial action, but poor teeth cannot long withstand attacks of mouth bacteria. The teeth should be brushed three times a day with some good cleansing agent. Regular visits to the dentist will save the pain caused by decayed teeth—and perhaps ill health or the inconvenience of false teeth.

D. F.—What is the cause of styes on the eyelid and what is the cure for them?

Ans.—A sty is a small boil on the eyelid due to the infection of one of the small glands at the root of each eyelid. Faulty nutrition due to an unbalanced diet is sometimes the underlying cause; also eye strain is sometimes a factor. Styes often occur in children recovering from measles or scarlet fever. A single sty may be regarded as trivial. The second attack should always be looked into. Glasses may be needed or the diet may be faulty or there may be some other underlying cause.

Mrs. M. K. T.—Will you please inform me just how contagious or infectious cancer really is? As it is necessary for me, with small children, to live in a home where there is such a patient, any advice will be acceptable.

Ans.—We are complying with your request for material on cancer. You will note that there is no authority for the belief that cancer is ever contagious. You and your children run no risk, therefore, of "catching" cancer from the patient living in your home. If there is an open discharging sore, it should be borne in mind that the discharge from it might cause an infection on the hands of the person dressing the wound. This would not be cancer but an ordinary infection such as might be caused by any other unhealed sore.

Mr. C. C. M.—Please give me some information on the cause and cure of ringworm. I have visited a doctor several times and he said to paint it with iodine. I have done so, but with no improvement as yet.

Ans.—Ringworm is a chronic disease of the skin caused by a vegetable parasite. The disease is contagious and the practice of good personal hygiene is important—regarding clean towels and brushes, shoes or clothing which may come in contact with the infected area. Sometimes a remedy may prove inefficient or too strenuous for a particular case and another must be tried, but by strict attention to personal hygiene and persistent treatment the disease is curable.

GRANGE PLAY

The Grange presented a musical play called "Listen To Me" on Tuesday and Wednesday night. The specialties between the acts and the fudge sold by the members were good.

THE BACK YARD GARDENER

Wait just a minute till I put my jack-knife away and I'll be right with you. I see, I've been having a very intimate, personal interview with an old friend, crab grass. Yep, crab grass comes around every year, and no matter how unpleasant or how inhospitable you may be, he seems to come back the next season. I like to think I'm making some headway in keeping him out of my lawn; in fact, I know the pest isn't nearly so bad as it was a few years ago. So I think it can be subdued.

Along about the last week in August I started using a canvas basket on the lawnmower every I cut the grass. Ordinarily I like to let the clippings lie right where they fall, because they make a good mulch for the grass roots. But when crab grass gets to producing seeds, I don't want them to fall on the ground. You see, it's an annual plant, and has to re-seed itself every year. And if you can catch the seeds in a basket, you're helping some to keep down next year's crop.

I'm a firm believer in keeping the lawn well fertilized, so it's growing vigorously; and I think that helps keep the crab grass under control. That is, if the regular lawn grass is growing strong enough, it will tend to crowd out the crab grass. That doesn't work a hundred per cent, but I think it will help keep the pest under control.

But once crab grass gets in, about the only way you can get it out is get down on your hands and knees, armed with a jack-knife, and dig the stuff up. It isn't such tough digging, but it's a tedious job, especially if you've got a lot of crab grass in the lawn. I like to start early in the season; and if you dig out the stuff as soon as you see it, then you don't have so much to do at one time, and it keeps the lawn from having large bare spaces which you would have if the crab grass took control of large spots and then you dug it all out.

You may need to sow a little seed to fill in those larger bare spaces, but just a small spot, where the crab grass has been, will be filled in next year by the natural spreading of the regular lawn grass.

NORTHFIELD SHOCKED BY SPEER DEATH

grounds around the campus have been combed for the weapon. Every possible angle has been investigated and District Attorney Bartlett who is directing the inquiry has been tireless in his efforts to obtain some clue to the unfortunate affair.

Many stories told by local people have been run down and any information however remote it might seem to be has been looked into. State Police under the command of Lt. Dasey have been on the campus since the first call went out for police but so far they have come up against a blank wall at the end of each investigation.

The baffling absence of a motive has hampered everyone working on the case. A man without a known enemy, a man who inspired all with whom he came in contact to be struck down from the dark seems too fantastic to be believable. Hopeless as the case may seem at this time it will be solved. It must be solved.

Elliott Speer was born November 1, 1898 at Englewood, New Jersey, the son of Robert Elliott and Emma Bailey Speer. Educated at Phillips Andover where he graduated in 1916 and Princeton University where he received the degree of Bachelor of Arts in 1920. Mr. Speer took graduate work in theology in New College at Edinburgh and in the Divinity School of the University of Edinburgh in 1921 and 1922. In 1924 he was ordained as a minister of the Presbyterian Church and the same year appointed chaplain and head of the Bible Department of Lafayette College.

While still a student in Princeton he served as a Y.M.C.A. secretary with the American Army in France. In 1926 he was called by the Board of Trustees of The Northfield Schools to serve as President. In this capacity Mr. Speer was called upon to assume, among other responsibilities, the raising of approximately $120,000 a year to meet the growing budget of the Schools. He went at this task with his usual vigor but soon realized that the securing of funds in this way was becoming increasingly difficult and uncertain. Soon after he assumed the leadership the Trustees agreed to his plan for securing an additional endowment and this plan actually came to a head in 1929 when preparation for the campaign was begun on July first.

Before the campaign had actually begun the October 1929 financial crash came. Some of his more cautious associates were ready to drop the idea but Mr. Speer won them over with the idea that if we were heading into a financial slump the additional endowment would be more necessary than ever.

With indomitable will and untiring effort he pushed the campaign through to a successful conclusion. The funds secured in this hard fought campaign have helped make it possible for the Schools to carry on with ever-increasing success.

NORTHFIELD SHOCKED BY SPEER DEATH

fulness during the long period of depression.

In 1931 Mr. Speer decided that his position as President of the Schools kept him too busy with executive duties and did not give him close contact with students. He succeeded Dr. Henry F. Cutler as headmaster of Mount Hermon School in September after a year's study in Edinburgh. His youth, his boundless energy, and his spirit of fair play immediately won him the highest place in the eyes of the students.

During the past summer Mr. Speer for the first time took an active part in the management of the General Conference. He did not preside nor speak except at a memorable communion service held early in the morning of the closing Sunday. Many of his friends who attended that service will, no doubt, long recall the great warmth and dignity with which he conducted the service. At the closing session, Mr. Speer was appointed by Wilfred W. Fry as one of a committee of four to conduct the 1935 General Conference. In March 1931 Mr. Speer married Charlotte Rose, daughter of Wilkes Barre, Pa. The three children are Caroline, 12, Eleanor, 8, and Margot, 4. Beside Mrs. Speer the three children, and his father and mother. Mr. Speer leaves two sisters and a brother.
